Tanjug Editor Quits After Attack on Soviet

STAT

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, June 24 (Reuters)—The Yugoslav press agency Tanjug said today that Momcilo Pudar, its editor in chief, had resigned after the agency published a commentary attacking the world Communist conference in Moscow earlier this month.

The commentary, published two weeks ago on the eve of the conference, condemned the convening of the meeting and contained indirect attacks on Soviet party policies.

The commentary was carried by the entire Yugoslav press, radio and television. The following day the Yugoslav party executive publicly described the commentary as one-sided and inaccurate.
